

In this project I did three things properly one of which was how I use css grid properly and ok. I took my time to figure out what worked and I am happy with the results. The second thing is my use of original content with my hand drawn comics used in the website; it truly felt like it was my own. The third thing was the amount of techniques in the code i went between advanced and simple code to truly bring out the website.

Things I could have done differently is used javascript. I have no knowledge of javascript and i didnt know the proper techniques used for it. Another was how much time I could have spent on it and the time management. I spent way too much time with the comics and not enough time researching javascript so I could have put it on there.
